Uniquely Singapore – that is how the travel trade promotes this small, prosperous nation. Singapore actually offers a rich experience for all travelers, and particularly for young people. Sentosa Island, Jurong Bird Park, a night safari, a science centre, museums, and of course shopping – there is so much for students to enjoy and learn.

But for EdTerra, what makes Singapore truly unique is its history, its people and its aspirations as a nation state. In spite of 250 years of subjugation, Singapore in 30 short years was able to transform itself from a developing country, fraught with problems, to one of the most prosperous nations in the world.

EdTerra would encourage each participant to explore and understand the processes that bridge Singapore's past to its present.

This understanding may enable the participants to contribute more effectively in the future, both as citizens and as leaders.

Human memory is short, so EdTerra has introduced a video component to the journey. Yes, during the five days, the participants will also work together to produce a video travelogue. A travelogue that is not just a record of a fun-filled learning experience, but also an inlet into the impressionable minds of the future caretakers of our planet. Impressions that replace the uniqueness of Singapore with the embrace of understanding, leading to the creation of a Singapore they can call their own. 'My Singapore' awaits— come discover it.

The bottom-right decorative area features a light blue floral pattern on a dark blue background. It includes several white icons: a star, a camera, and several circles of varying sizes, some with smaller circles inside them.
